02.14.23

Partner John Terzaken, Counsel Josh Buckland and Associates Laurel Fresquez and Andrew Ward authored an article that was published by Thomson Reuters Westlaw titled, “2023 global cartel forecast.” The article detailed likely areas of antitrust enforcement in 2023 and noted how, rather than turning to an international focus, enforcement in the U.S. and abroad remains primarily domestic. It further highlighted enforcement trends to watch for the upcoming year, including the decline in leniency applications, a shift to other detection methods such as bid-screening and algorithmic tools to generate case leads and new areas of enforcement, such as the revived criminal enforcement of monopolization, focus on labor markets, antitrust implications of ESG initiatives and an enforcement agenda focused on digital markets.
